

The Response Of The American Public: Creation Must Be Taught In Schools

The American Family News Network (AFN), a U.S. news agency, asked its readers the question "Should topics such as creationism or intelligent design be taught in public schools alongside the theory of evolution?" in a survey on its One News web site. Ninety-three percent of those taking part in the poll on the site attracting more than 1 million visitors a month, replied "Yes."

In agreement with the results from polls in many European countries, the American public also want Creation to be taught in schools. The results of this and similar surveys are a reflection of the intellectual enlightenment taking place across the world in the 21st century. In the very near future, the theory of evolution will take its place in the scientific literature as the worst scientific fraud in history.
