Bangladeş'in bağımsız haber servisi olan The New Nation, 8 Ekim 2009 tarihinde Avrupa'daki Darwinizme dayanan eğitim sisteminin değişmesi gerektiğine dikkat çeken bir haber yayınladı. "Eğitim Politikası Kültürel Değerlerimize Cevap Vermeli" başlıklı haberde, Harun Yahya'nın Yaratılış Atlası isimli eserinin bu dayatmacı sisteme meydan okuduğu bildirildi ve kitabın Avrupa'daki etkisi şöyle aktarıldı:

Örneğin AB eğitim politikası dinsizlik, başka bir deyişle Darwinizm temeli üzerine kurulmuştur. Kısa bir süre önce Türkiye'de Harun Yahya tarafından şaşırtıcı ve özenle hazırlanmış Yaratılış Atlası adlı bir kitap yayımlandı. Bu kitap evrim teorisini açık bir şekilde eleştiriyor. Öğrenciler, öğretmenler ve bilim adamları bu kitabı okuduktan sonra, okullarda kendilerine öğretilenlere şaşırdılar. Bu kitap tüm Avrupa'da entellektüeller arasında güçlü tartışmalar başlattı. Sonunda, uzun vadede kendi temel ideolojilerini saptırabilir endişesiyle, Yaratılış Atlası (modern dinsizliğin ya da ateizmin doğduğu yer olan) Fransa'da yasaklandı. AB eğitim politikasını yapanlar endişelendiler ve bu meseleyi nasıl durdurup bir ana çizgi belirleyeceklerine dair bir plan yaptılar.

Yaratılış Atlası'nın Darwinizmin gerçek yüzünü ortaya koyması, materyalist anlayışın hakim olduğu Avrupa ülkelerinde, ideolojilerine öldürücü bir darbe olarak görüldü. Yaratılış Atlası'nın insanlar üzerindeki etkisinden öylesine çekindiler ki, Ortaçağın dayatmacı, faşizan yöntemlerini anımsatan bir girişimle Fransa ve Belçika'da Atlas'ı yasaklama kararı alındı. Fikirden böylesine korkmak, paniğe kapılmak kuşkusuz Yaratılış Atlası'nın ikna ediciliği ve gerçekleri ortaya koyuş şeklindeki berraklığı tasdik etmektedir. Çünkü Yaratılış Atlası evrim teorisini eleştiren Avrupa'daki ilk ya da tek kitap değildir. Ancak Yaratılış Atlası'nda bilimsel delillerin bir ilkokul öğrencisinin anlayacağı açıklıkla sergilenmesi, akılcı bir üslupla Allah'ın varlığının delillerinin gösterilmesi ciddi bir tehdit olarak görüldü. Ancak bu yasakçı anlayış Yaratılış Atlası'nın daha çok tanınmasına ve özellikle Avrupa gençliğinin internetten doğruları öğrenmek için bu kitabı daha fazla okumasına sebep oldu. Nitekim söz konusu haberde de öğrencilerin derslerde zorla anlatılan evrim yalanına artık direndikleri aktarılmaktadır:

Bugünlerde öğretmenler öğrencilerin evrim aleyhindeki sorularıyla yüzleşmek zorunda kalıyorlar ve öğretmenler yeterli cevap veremiyorlar. Bu yüzden büyük bir problem haline geliyor...

Education policy should respond to our cultural values

Education policy is a backbone of a nation. That's why every country designs this policy very carefully according to their guiding principle or ideology. For instance, EU education policy is based on secularism/atheism or in other word, Darwinism. Recently an amazingly and meticulously organized book, named Atlas of creation published by Hanun Yahya of Turkey. This book clearly argues against Evolution theory. After reading this book, students, teachers, scientists become confused what they were being taught in school. This book stimulated strong discussion among intellectuals in all over Europe. At the end, Atlas of creation is banned from France (the birth place of modern secularism or atheism), since it may devaluate their guiding ideology in the long run. EU education policy makers are worried and have devised a plan how to tackle this issue and made a guideline. Worth mentioning here is that EU value is based on Darwinian ideology.

The education policy issue is very sensitive in Europe as it is emotionally attached with Darwinism. Last year Prof Raus, director of education, Royal Society (All Nobel Laureates are fellows there) had to step down due to his comment about teaching creationism in the schools, as a worldview but not as science (http://news.bbc.co.uk/2/hi/uk\_news/education/7619673.stm). He himself is a staunch evolutionist. These days' teachers have to face students questioning against evolution theory when teachers can't answer properly. That's why it is becoming a big problem in EU. America. He suggested that creationism should be taught in order to cope up that awkward situation in the class. After that comment, he became a clergyman and had to resign from the office! Similarly, in our country those who raise rational argument against secular any issue, they are being labeled as fundamentalist by secular intellectuals or by secularist media. It is a old aged ploy to divert the attention from the focal point. Major concern of all secularists in Europe is that if evolution theory is argued, it will lose its significance as an ideology in future. That's why they resist this happening at any cost. They don't even care their peers. No compromise in this issue. Although Prof Raus is a world known famous educationalist and researcher, scientists including Nobel laureates questioned his intellectual integrity! Actually, Royal Society helps to design education policy for the Western world.

We agree that our education system must be modernized but not through sacrificing core values (religious moral teachings) of our society. We all are well aware about the ideology of the member of education policy makers. In one word, the goal of Education policy 2009 is to make secular system as it is openly mentioned in the policy. I believe, if this policy is being implemented, there is no way to save the present social values in 20/30 years time. Relevant to mention that when cultural culture (DISH) was initiated in our country, most of the people were concerned about the devaluation of our Kirtih culture. See, 10 years later, there is no such talk. Family members are enjoying Hollywood, Bollywood movies, songs, MTV, etc together! Even they don't feel shy to discuss about the beauty of actor and actress. Over all set up and get up of the society is changing rapidly. In some part of the country, culture is not that much different as compare to Europe or America. This is real now but it was unimaginable decade ago.

From this perspective, Turkey would be a good model. Turkey's Ottoman had ruled the world for seven hundred years where faith was their guiding principle. When they became relaxed about their core principles, their values were degraded gradually. Last nail of the cultural coffin was put by Kamal Ataturk. He forcefully modernized the education system in Turkey. All religious teachings in the schools were banned, rather taught secular moral teachings (apparently similar idea in Bangladesh proposed education policy 2009 in long term perspective). Ataturk made also secular Army. As a consequence, a staunch secular elite has emerged, who is dictating the society in the secular direction. Whenever there is any concern about secular institution, secular army comes to the spot to rescue.

At the beginning of any policy general people do not realise the implications or repercussion coming ahead. When they do realise, there is no way to return. In Turkey, prohibition is legalised in the name of freedom of choice, while wearing headscarf is banned! About one million female students are denied since 1980 to study in the Universities in Turkey as they wear headscarf. Most popular current Islamic voted government is helpless and hapless. They can't do anything about this issue. Secularists also wanted to ban on keeping beard but they had to quit this plan since atheist GURU Karl Marx, Darwin et al had got beard. Even people on the dying bed are not escaped from their fundamental secular values. In 2002, a 72 year old woman named Ercan collapsed to death in front of doctors of secular Istanbul University medical hospital who refused to treat her because her medical card shows wearing hijab! See, normal people is paying the price for the secular policies.

It is the immense duty of educated people/intellectuals to make awareness in the society to stop this happening in our country. Otherwise we have to responsible to upcoming future generations and eventually to the creator.
