

Terör ile baş başa bırakılmış ülke Türkiye

IRNA 1934 Islamic Republic of Iran

Home Politics Economy Art & Culture Sport Photo Archive

Quran manuscript sold by Christie's- 8 hours ago

Code: 81784440 (4908639) : Date: 04/10/2015 : Time: 12:04 | Print Version : Send To Friend

Importance of Turkey to Iranian economic renewal

Tehran, Oct 4, IRNA – During the post-deal period and with gradual removal of sanctions, Iran can resume its place as a main supplier of energy.

The partnership between Iran and Turkey, traditionally a hub for energy distribution in the region, could help the Islamic Republic occupy the place it deserves in the energy export sector.

The following opinion piece by Harun Yahya, published by the English-language paper Iran Daily, highlights the Turkish author's viewpoints on the issue.

Anatolia has always occupied a position of strategic importance, from the Hittites to Alexander the Great and from Rome to the Ottoman Empire. In addition to its geopolitical location, Turkey, which also stands in Anatolia, is too in a very important position due to its being a distribution point for energy resources.

The two essential elements that countries need for development are water and energy. Wars, civil strife, divisions and conflicts in many regions generally occur over water and energy.

Turkey is a country that stands at the center of a region where water and energy wars have taken place. Some 70 percent of the world's natural gas reserves are in close proximity to the country; the situation is similar when it comes to petrol.

When we add the Istanbul and Dardanelles Straits to Turkey's proximity to the Strait of Hormuz, the Suez Canal and the Mandeb Strait, we can clearly see the important position which it occupies.

As energy wars are going on all round Turkey, a new player has now entered the stage; Iran, which had been largely excluded from the world energy sector. Now that Iran is again a player in the game with the recent agreement signed between Tehran and the P5+1 (The five permanent members of the UN Security Council, the USA, Russia, China, France and United Kingdom plus Germany) there is no doubt that many balances will change.

Like Turkey, Iran also occupies a very special geographic position. The country stands right in the middle of the Caspian and Persian Gulf region energy fields and it is a critical staging post in the transportation of those resources to China. In addition, since it shares a border with Turkey, it can easily access the European and world energy markets by using Turkey's pipelines.

Iran is primarily known for its oil reserves. Throughout three decades of embargo, Iran was China's number one oil supplier. Today, however, it is in the whole world's sights because of its natural gas reserves.

Iran has natural gas reserves of 34 trillion m3, representing 18.2 percent of the world's total reserves, making it one of the world's most important countries. At the same time it is the world's fourth largest natural gas producer.

Terör bir ülkenin topraklarına uğradığında, terörün gerçek yüzüyle yüzleşenler o ülkenin insanları, belasıyla uğraşan ise o ülkenin devleti olur. Hiçbir komşu devlet, müttefik devlet, dost devlet sizin gerçekte ne ile mücadele ettiğinizin gerçek anlamda farkında değildir. Ne yazık ki dünya üzerinde siyasiler, materyalizmin çatışma ve bencilliğe dayanan tehlikeli Medeniyetler Çatışması fikrini kendi çıkarları adına kabul etmişlerdir. Dünyada yaşanan insanlık vahşetine seyirci kalınmasının temelindeki sorun budur.

İran'ın resmi haber ajansı IRNA Harun Yahya makalelerini yayınlamaktadır.

<http://www.harunyahya.com/en/eserler/208655/Turkey%20left%20to%20face%20terror>

<http://www.thehansindia.com/posts/index/2015-09-28/Turkey-left-to-face-terror-178038>

<https://www.harunyahya.info/makaleler/teror-ile-bas-basa-birakilmis-ulke-turkiye-83727>