

Suriyeli Kardeşlerimize Vatandaşlık Vicdanın Gereğidir

Granting Syrians citizenship

by Harun Yahya

Of late, an illustration depicting the tragedy of the oppressed Syrians has become popular on social media. The illustration titled "Choices for Syrian children" shows two children, whose images have become the symbols of the bloody war in Syria — Omran and Aylan.

Omran represents those Syrians who have not left their homeland despite the war. The cute 5-year-old Omran was pulled from the rubble of a building following aerial bombardment. He was covered in dust from head to toe. With blood on his face, he was sitting quietly on a seat in an ambulance. He was visibly stunned after the shocking experience. He was neither crying nor speaking. It is the cost of not leaving the land of his birth; a land full of violence, deaths, bombs, starvation and sufferings.

The other one was Aylan, who lost his life when the dinghy he had got on with his family, sank and whose body was lying on the beach. His picture symbolizes those Syrians who left their homeland and paid the ultimate price for trying to reach countries where they could live in peace and safety.

The illustration of these two innocent children sums up the dilemma of the Syrian people. The majority of Syrians under bombardment do not know what to do now; they are in despair and have no solution in sight. It is surely a right and reasonable choice for people to leave their destroyed homeland at war and seek refuge in other countries. What is wrong and not understandable is that some countries remain insensitive to their miseries and leave innocent people to die without making any allowances for children, women or the elderly.

Turkey is taking care of approximately 3 million Syrians and trying to look after them like their own children. Everyone undoubtedly appreciates this excellent attitude. However, Turkey is a developing country with limited resources. Despite its limited resources, Turkey has spent approximately $10 billion on refugees. But surely it is not possible for a country with limited means to solve all the problems.

Suriyeli kardeşlerimize verilecek Türkiye Cumhuriyeti vatandaşlığı, onların Türk toplumuyla kaynaşmasını kuşkusuz hızlandıracaktır. Ayrıca kardeşlerimizin temel ihtiyaçlarını karşılamalarını, çalışma hayatlarındaki zorlukları aşmalarını, kapsamlı sağlık hizmetlerine ve çağdaş eğitim imkanlarına erişimlerini kolaylaştıracaktır. Bu girişim kardeşlerimizin gelecekle ilgili tedirginliklerini, hayatlarına dair belirsizliklerini ortadan kaldırmaya yardımcı olacaktır. Kısacası, başta kadınlar ve çocuklar olmak üzere hepsinin yaşam koşullarını iyileştirecek bir şefkat hamlesidir.
